JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, THURSDAY, JANUARY 26, 1882.

Published Every Evening Except Sunday, at $7 a Year.

NUMBER 273

The report of the railway commissioner of Massachusetts, says that State has 3,148 miles of railway track, representing, with rolling stock, $122,155,614. Last year 181 persons were killed and 115 injured.

The janitor of the Normal college in New York city, receives a salary of $2-160 a year, which is more than some of the teachers receive. The experience of all who frequently attend church, the theater, or public halls in general, is that a good janitor is about as useful as a good teacher.

The Wisconsin delegation in Congress are urging ex-Governor Smith for a foreign appointment. They are making an effort to secure him the China or Chili mission, but have told the President that any second-class mission would satisfy them and please the Governor. While President Arthur did not give the Wisconsin members a positive answer, they entertain strong hope that he will give Governor Smith an important foreign mission.

Congressman Harmon, of Pennsylvania, has introduced a bill providing that any person who has served faithfully in the postal service of the United States for twenty-five years, or who, after a continuous service of ten years, shall become physically and mentally disabled, shall receive for the remainder of his life, an annual pension equal to two-thirds of his annual salary at the time of his retirement. There is a seeming disposition on the part of some to make this, like England, a nation of pensioners.

There is a model bank president living at Atlanta—Major Campbell Wallace, president of the Merchants' bank—a man who is not only well-to-do, but is also generous. When the stockholders of the bank met the other day he requested that his salary should be cut down to a nominal sum and the large remainder divided among the employees who did the real work. This is contrary to the rule set in the average large manufacturing establishments, where the wages of the employees are cut down that the salary of the officers might be increased.

Now that Guiteau is convicted, he should be sentenced to be hanged between the hours of ten and two o'clock some dark night with no one present but the jailor, the hangman, and the undertaker. Even the benefit of clergy should be denied him. His body should then be quietly carried away to some Potter's field where its identity would be lost forever. The next morning, the papers throughout the country should merely mention the fact that the blasphemous wretch was hanged some time during the night, and forever thereafter his name should be treated with silent contempt.

THE CONVICTION OF GUTEAU.

The gladdening news was wired all over the country last evening between five and six o'clock that the jury had found Guiteau guilty of murder in the first degree after having been out only six minutes. The fall of Richmond and the capitulation of Vicksburg was hardly more cheerfully received than the conviction of the lowest blackguard, the most despised wretch, the boldest villain, and the coldest-hearted assassin of the time. There was some fear in the minds of the people that the jury might disagree in consequence of one jurymen being reported as believing that Guiteau was actually insane. Then, the rule of law, held to be good in Illinois, New York and other States, giving the prisoner the benefit of any doubt, on the plea of insanity, was urged with great force by Seville and Reed, and this tended to create the impression that the jury might fail to agree. But the fears of the people were ill-founded. The remarkable argument of Judge Porter for the prosecution swept away the whole theory of the defense, and laid Charles J. Guiteau before the jury just as God and the world see him—a guilty, miserable, vulgar, hardened, misceivenced piece of humanity. There is rejoicing all over the land to-day that the man who gloried in the crime of assassination, is fast marching to the gallows. He will calm down a little now. With the scaffold in view, with the day of execution fixed, Guiteau will not do the boasting he has done since the trial began; and neither will his blasphemy give him any more pleasure. His race is run. His insults to the mighty dead, his outrageous attack on justice, and his mockery of the Almighty, have come to an end, and it is hoped that there will be no unnecessary delay in bringing him to the gallows.

As to the probabilities when the execution will take, this can be said: The jury having found Guiteau guilty, his counsel will be entitled to file their bill of exceptions at any time during the continuance of the forthcoming term of the court in Washington, and the court will be compelled to grant a hearing upon the exceptions at once. If the exceptions are over-ruled, as they probably will be, Judge Cox can, under the law, pass sentence at once, and within thirty days thereafter the sentence can be executed. The law provides, also, that the prisoner shall be entitled to one intervening term between conviction and sentence. If the counsel for Guiteau should fail to file their bill of exceptions before the termination of the next term—the one beginning Monday next—then Judge Cox can, within ten days after the termination of the term, pronounce sentence.

Let the country hope and pray that there may be dispatch about this business, and that Guiteau shall remain out of the grave no longer than common decency demands.

PORTER'S PERORATION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The following is the closing of Judge Porter's great legal oration for the government in the Guiteau trial:

Mr. Porter (closing)—Gentlemen, the time has come when I must close. The Government has presented its case before you, and we have endeavored to discharge our duty to the best of our ability. His Honor has endeavored to discharge his. I know you will be faithful to your oaths and discharge yours. So discharge it, that by your action, at least, political assassination shall find no sanction to make it a precedent hereafter. He who has ordained that human life shall be shielded by human law from human crime presides over your deliberations, and the verdict which shall be given or withheld to-day will be recorded where we all have eyes to appear.

I trust that the verdict will be prompt, that it will represent the majesty of the law, your integrity, and the honor of the country; and that this trial, which has so deeply interested all the nations of the earth, may result in a warning to reach all the lands that political murder shall not be used as a means of promoting party ends or political revolutions. I trust also the time shall come in consequence of the attention that shall be called to the considerations growing out of this trial when, by an international arrangement between the various governments, the law shall be so strengthened that political assassins shall find no refuge on the face of the earth.

GUILTY.

Such Was the Just Verdict of the Jury Against Guiteau, and the Country Breathes Freer, Since the Voice of Justice has Spoken.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—After the jury had been out about twenty minutes, a recess was taken until 5:30 o'clock. Many of the audience, who had virtually been imprisoned since 9:30 in the morning, availed themselves of the opportunity to obtain fresh air and lunch. The prisoner, at his request, had been allowed, soon after the jury left the court-room, to retire to the little room he had occupied since the trial began as a waiting room during recess. Before leaving the court-room he evinced considerable nervousness, but on getting away to comparative seclusion his usual composure and assurance soon returned to him. He sent out for some apples, with which he treated his attendants, meanwhile chatting familiarly and good-naturedly. He was asked what he thought the jury would do, and replied: "I think they will acquit me or disagree, don't you?"

Within ten minutes after recess had been taken the jury called to the bailiff in waiting that they were ready with their verdict.

They were informed a recess had been taken and Judge Cox had left the court-room. So they remained in their room until the court reassembled.

The rumor that the jury had agreed was quickly spread from one to another, and the excited crowd surged back into the court-room, and anxiously awaited what all seemed to expect, a verdict of guilty. The musty, antique room is devoid of gas, and a score or more of candles which had been placed upon the desks of Judge, counsel, and reporters imparted a weird and fanciful, unnatural aspect to the grim old place. The shadows thrown upon the dark background of the walls seemed like fitting specters to usher in the somber procession of those who held in their hands the destiny of a human life.

First came the prisoner, with a quick, nervous step, and as he seated himself in the dock, perhaps for the last time, the light of the solitary candle fell full upon his face, and disclosed its more than usual pallor. Not tremor of the limbs or movement of the muscles of the face was observable as he threw back his head and fixed his eyes upon the door through which the jury were to enter.

Judge Cox soon afterward took his seat. The eric called "Order" and the jury, at 5:35, filed slowly into their seats. Every sound was hushed save the voice of the clerk as he propounded to the foreman the usual inquiry. Clear and distinct came the reply, "We have."

"What is your verdict, guilty or not guilty?"

With equal distinctness came the reply, "Guilty as indicted."

Then the pent-up feelings of the crowd found expression in uproarious demonstrations of applause and approval.

"Order," "order," shouted the bailiff. Seville and counsel for the prosecution were simultaneously upon their feet. Seville attempted to address the court, but the district attorney shouted, "Wait till we have the verdict complete and in due form of law."

Order was at length restored, and the clerk, again addressing the jury, said: "Your foreman says, 'Guilty, as indicted.'"

"So say we all of us." "We do," all responded.

Another demonstration of approval followed this announcement, but not so prolonged as the first. Seville demanded a poll of the jury, which was granted, and each juror was called by name, and each, in a firm voice, promptly responded, "Guilty." As the last name was called, the prisoner shrieked:

"My blood will be upon the heads of that jury. Don't you forget it."

Seville again addressed the court, saying: "Your Honor, I do not desire to forfeit any right I may have under the law and practice in this district. If there is anything that I ought to do now to save those rights, I would be indebted to Your Honor to indicate it to me?"

Judge Cox, in reply, assured him he should have every opportunity, that the charge would be furnished him in print to-morrow, and he would be accorded all the time allowed by law in which to file his exception, and that he would also be entitled to four days within which to move arrest for judgment.

Guiteau who form the moment Judge Cox began delivering his charge, had dropped completely his air of flippancy and arrogance, and sat with rigid features and compressed lips, called out in tones of desperation, "God will avenge this outrage."

Judge Cox then turned to the jury and said:

"Gentlemen of the jury: I cannot express too many thanks for the manner in which you have discharged your duty. You have richly merited the thanks of your countrymen, and I feel assured you will take with you to your homes the approval of your consciences. With thanks, gentlemen of the jury, I dismiss you."

With this announcement the court was declared adjourned. And now the famous trial, which has absorbed public interest and attention for more than ten weeks, was ended.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy, "Thomas' Electric Oil cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas Electric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and "Thomas' Electric Oil cured them," and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh. For deafness and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right hand, and nothing relieves me like "Thomas' Electric Oil."

TRIBUTES TO CARPENTER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Business was suspended and the House paid a tribute of respect to the memory of Senator Matthew H. Carpenter.

Mr. Williams (Wis.) dwelt upon his ability as a lawyer, his honesty as a man, his integrity and industry as a representative of Wisconsin. The vacancy his loss caused in Wisconsin could not be filled. Grand was his work, was the legislation he had fashioned with his brilliant mind. Where could be found in all this gifted Nation a heart so brave and kind?

Mr. Caswell eulogized his courage of conviction, his devotion to his friends, his eminent services to his State, and his deep love of country.

Mr. Humphreys predicted that Senator Carpenter would live in unfaded memory of his noble and generous heart, his many qualities, and his illustrious and brilliant career.

Mr. Hazelton said there was no malice in his heart, no tyranny in his nature, nothing but kindness and gentleness to all.

Enquiries were also delivered by Messrs. Kasson, of Iowa, Dunnell, of Minnesota, Orth, of Indiana, Robeson, of New Jersey, Tyler, of Vermont, and Deuster, of Wisconsin.

The House then, out of respect to the memory of the deceased, adjourned.

The Man Who Smiles—A Road Agent
With a Record.

There is in the Detroit Work-house to-day a prisoner whose smile is as soft and sweet as a woman's, and the stranger who meets him is instinctively drawn toward him by his clear, blue eyes, soft voice and gentle smile. And yet that very man is accounted the shrewdest, sharpest and most "nervy" prisoner of the lot. The fact that two officers rode over a thousand miles with him, handcuffed and shackled and constantly watched, is proof of the above assertion. When they turned him over at last to the custody of the Superintendent they left the following record on the books:

"Prisoner has been engaged in one train robbery at least, and in half a dozen stage and highway robberies. Has broken jail three times and bears the scars of several wounds. Has the reputation of being a shooter and a fighter; has killed at least three men; was a pal of Wild Bill; is supposed to know all the leading outlaws in the far West. Is sharp and crafty and has great nerve. Look out for him. Offense, highway robbery."

The "Smiler" has not yet exhibited the slightest desire to see the outside walls of the Work-house, but is reported as one of the most orderly and quiet prisoners in the institution.

The first Deadwood line stage robbed was the work of a single man, and if that man was not the prisoner we write of, then he has a twin brother. The robbery occurred just at sunset, six miles from Deadwood. The stage contained seven men, all well armed. It was just rounding a thicket when a man stepped in front of the horses, halted them, and quietly said to the driver:

"If you pull a line until I am through I'll send a bullet through your head!"

This was accompanied by such a soft, bland smile that the astonished driver yelled back:

"Stop your fooling, or I'll run over you."

But the smile was deceiving. Up came a navy revolver on line with the driver's eye, and his teeth chattered as he loosened the reins and soothed the horses. Yells and shouts were heard inside the stage, but none of the passengers suspected what was happening, until the road-agent pulled open one of the doors and called out:

"Now, then, gentlemen, please climb down!"

"Who the dickens are you?" was shouted at him by three or four in chorus, and his smile was honey itself as he answered:

"I'll introduce myself directly. Come, gentlemen—these shooters are in a hurry to hurt some one!"

He backed off a few feet, a revolver in either hand, and the passengers began climbing down.

"Leave your arms in the stage!" shouted the "Smiler." "I'll pop the man who brings out any sort of weapon with him! Come, now—sun's going down fast!"

There were seven revolvers and three Winchester rifles among the passengers, but that one man had the bulge on the crowd. Men are half-disarmed when surprised. Coopt them up in addition to the surprise, and pluck is gone. The road-agent knows this, and the fact is as good as half a dozen men behind him. One by one the seven climbed down and stood in a row, and as the last man left the coach the "Smiler" confronted the line and softly remarked:

"I will now trouble you to deposit your watches and money on the ground!"

With many a groan and curse and sigh the request was complied with. Those who had wallets lost all; those who had divided their money in different pockets saved half. Two of the seven had no watches to lose. After the last man had "deposited" the robber pointed to the open door of the stage and said:

"It's a tough country, and I won't take your weapons. Please climb in."

As the last man mounted the step the robber slipped behind the coach and called to the driver to go on at a gallop, at the same time firing three bullets over the coach to start things with a rush. Half a mile away the coach halted and the seven victims jumped down with their arms, but the "Smiler" had disappeared with his booty.

Less than a month after the robbery related above, the "Smiler" was half asleep in a Custer City saloon, when in came a sharp knock as "Grizzly," accompanied by three or four men, whose admiration for his brag and bluster made them his backers. "Grizzly" wanted to fight one, but he wanted to pick his man. When he saw the "Smiler" dozing away in his chair he thought he had discovered a "tender-foot" whom he could wallow. Without a word of warning he advanced and pulled the sleeper's nose. The soft smile came to the little man's face as he slowly rose up, and his voice was no more than a whisper as he inquired:

"Stranger, did ye mean that?"

"You bet!"

"Then such of this crowd as don't like bullets had better get!"

Three or four men rushed out just as the revolvers commenced to speak. The "Smiler" was alone—the bully had three backers. For three or four minutes there was a constant pop! pop! of revolvers, and then two of "Grizzly's" friends rushed out and ran away, both made to have sunlight. A platform was made on one side where a couple of hundred bushels of corn could be piled up, to be shoveled over as required. When the real work of fattening came on, the pen was subdivided into six or more places, so that about twelve or fifteen hogs were together. This prevented piling up to a dangerous extent in the early cold weather, and kept them quiet. All that was fed those hogs counted. In the cold rains of the fall they were under good protection, and they were always ready for market about twenty days before any others in the neighborhood.

Other improvements were made by our enterprising farmer. All the swill from the house was hauled away to the pen in a barrel hung on pivots, and emptied into a tank opening directly into the trough, and by raising a two-inch gate the slop, which had been mixed with meal and stuff, so that it "soured," had free access to the "boarders" in the pen. This investment paid, and paid very largely. "It is the thing that has given us this farm; it is our 'mortgage extinguisher,' and has no patent on it," said our friend, in whose cheerful home we found genuine hospitality. So we give a picture of that pen, as we saw it, and commend it as the best thing of the kind we have seen.—Oskaloosa (Iowa) Herald.

Rather than sell fish below the price fixed by them, monopolists of London throw tons of fish into the sea every day. The trade is beginning to attract public attention, and it is not unlikely that Parliament will be called upon to legislate in such a way as to prevent this wasteful destruction of food.

HOME AND FARM.

—No starch should ever be put into anything a baby has to wear.

—A New York doctor declares that horses ought to be treated to fruit and sugar now and then, and he agrees with Mr. Spurgeon that above all, one day's rest in seven is important for them.

—Sweet potatoes require a temperature of at least sixty deg. for their preservation or they will decay very quickly. The place of storage should also be dry. When a large quantity is to be kept over, a room in the house, or an outhouse specially prepared, or an upper loft in some building may be provided with lath bins, and furnished with a stove so as to keep the temperature regular and sufficiently warm.

—Snow Cream.—Beat the whites of five eggs to a stiff froth, add two large spoonfuls of fine white sugar, a large spoonful of rose water, or pine apple. Beat the whole well together and add a pint of thick cream. This is very nice to use over graham cocoanut. Heap the cocoanut in the center of a handsome dish. Pour over this several spoonfuls of the snow cream, and call it a dish of snow.

—Pumpkin-pie.—Stew the pumpkin very dry, indeed; take a pint of rich cream, or if this is not obtainable, half a pint of warm milk, with one-quarter of a pound of butter stirred well into it; beat eight eggs very light, and stir them into the other ingredients, together with sugar enough to make it sweet; add to this a grated nutmeg, a large teaspoonful of powdered mace and cinnamon mixed, a wine-glass of rose-water mixed together, and a tiny pinch of salt; beat together very hard, and bake in a rich paste.

—Cellars must have ventilation in the coldest weather, and this should be provided for by making a double air-flue from outside having two outlets—one near the ground into the bottom of the cellar, and one some feet above from the upper part of the cellar. A double window should then be provided which may be opened if necessary. Clean straw may be placed against the wall outside for protection, and held by boards and some earth, but a cellar should always be built tight enough to need no such outside protection.

—Pickled Purple Cabbage.—Quarter the cabbage, lay in a wooden tray, sprinkle thickly with salt, and set the cellar until the next day; drain off the brine, wipe dry, lay in the sun for two hours, and cover with cold vinegar for twelve hours; prepare the pickle by seasoning enough vinegar to cover the cabbage, with equal quantities of mace, cloves, whole white peppers, a cup of sugar to every gallon of vinegar, and a teaspoonful of celery seed for every pint; pack the cabbage in a stone jar; boil the vinegar and spices five minutes and pour on hot; cover and set away in a cool, dry place. This will be ripe in six weeks.

—It has been generally supposed that Indian corn was so much of a tropical plant that Northern varieties, especially those large ones of the Mississippi Valley, would stand any reasonable amount of heat and drought both in the upper and lower cotton belts. But the experience of this year has corrected this notion, for it is found that in Louisiana the Creole (that is the native corn) has produced fair crops under conditions of heat and drought where corn the product of Northern seed has wholly failed. This admits of the reasonableness of the idea that there are varieties in existence capable of withstanding an unusual amount of drought and that at the same time will attain maturity under a comparatively low summer temperature, while there are others, which, having acquired the tendency to make strong and large root growth, will yield good crops on comparatively poor soils.

A Good Feeding Pen.

We have a farmer friend who has a feeding pen, which he calls his "mortgage extinguisher"—a good name, indeed, for its adoption by him permitted that blessed sort of a job to be done for his farm. Our friend is the owner of a quarter section in the central portion of the State, and the raising of hogs has been the leading feature of his agricultural work. Finding that he had ill-luck with his hogs, he conceived the sensible idea that if he would feed his hogs on floors, keep them supplied with abundant good water, and where he could reasonably protect them against storms, he would escape, so he went to work on the following plan: Selecting a place sloping to the west in his hog lot, he built a pen, twenty by sixty feet. The posts were cut from the timber and put in so that the bottom of the pen was four feet above the ground. He hewed out the timber necessary to make the frame good and strong, running a beam through the middle. This was covered with two-inch plank, twelve inches wide being used, with a slope of one foot in twenty. Sides and ends were put on four feet high of the same plank. A "run-away" was made at one corner for the hogs to run up to the feeding place. A water trough was put in, reaching along the whole upper side, eight inches deep and ten wide, out of two-inch stuff. The water problem was settled by the digging of a well at the end of the pen, where the pump could turn its supply directly into the trough. At the lower side the planks serving as sides were raised two inches or more from the floor, so that the cobs and excrement would work through and fall out. This pen, unroofed, was used one season; then a light, movable roof was put up that could be run on rollers into sections, so that half the pen could be made to have sunlight. A platform was made on one side where a couple of hundred bushels of corn could be piled up, to be shoveled over as required. When the real work of fattening came on, the pen was subdivided into six or more places, so that about twelve or fifteen hogs were together. This prevented piling up to a dangerous extent in the early cold weather, and kept them quiet. All that was fed those hogs counted. In the cold rains of the fall they were under good protection, and they were always ready for market about twenty days before any others in the neighborhood.

Other improvements were made by our enterprising farmer. All the swill from the house was hauled away to the pen in a barrel hung on pivots, and emptied into a tank opening directly into the trough, and by raising a two-inch gate the slop, which had been mixed with meal and stuff, so that it "soured," had free access to the "boarders" in the pen. This investment paid, and paid very largely. "It is the thing that has given us this farm; it is our 'mortgage extinguisher,' and has no patent on it," said our friend, in whose cheerful home we found genuine hospitality. So we give a picture of that pen, as we saw it, and commend it as the best thing of the kind we have seen.—Oskaloosa (Iowa) Herald.

BRIEFLETS.

—The ice crop is large and safe.

—A heavy fog enveloped the city, to-day.

—The January thaw has undoubtedly arrived.

—The Hasenwinkle Ideals play in Madison to-night.

—The days are nine hours and forty minutes long.

—The weather continues to pay no attention to Vennor.

—H. A. Skavlen, the turnkey at the county jail, is at his post again.

—One year ago this morning the thermometer stood one degree below zero.

—Young Lepper was held for trial by the municipal court yesterday afternoon.

—Street Commissioner Church is at work collecting the delinquent poll-tax.

—Mrs. A. V. H. Carpenter, of Milwaukee, is registered at the Myers House, to-day.

—Mrs. James Bonnell, of Milwaukee is in the city, visiting Mrs. Richard Valentine.

—The Milwaukee Street bridge is receiving some repairs which are much needed.

—Mr. Richard Valentine went to St. Paul this afternoon on telegraph and railroad business.

—Mr. E. R. Pierce is to fill the professor's chair in the primary and writing department of the telegraph school.

—I. C. Brownell is passing out the "Sparrow" brand of cigars this afternoon, says it's a girl and that he is feeling quite well.

—The box sheet, for Harry Deakin's, Liliputians, will be opened at Prentice & Evenson's, to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

—H. D. McKinney has purchased a very fine roadster of Mr. Clay Putnam, of Brodhead, for which he paid a handsome sum.

—O. P. Myers and J. S. Shorb, organizers of the big "United States circus, museum and menagerie," are in the city attending to the show business.

—There was some of the finest acting, done in "The Hunchback" last night that has been seen in Janesville since Keene played Richard III last March.

—Henry Booth sailed from London, England, on the 20th of January, for Janesville, for the purpose of joining the Valentine school of telegraphy.

—Dr. Henry Palmer has been elected medical director of the Grand Army of the Republic, for the department of Wisconsin, at the annual meeting just held in Milwaukee.

—Archie Reid has received telegraphic advices from parties at Kankama that his brother James was alive and well at the 18th. The James Reid that died at Florence of small-pox must have been of another family.

—The damp weather of this forenoon compelled a suspension of work at the Hogboom & Atwood ice house. The house is nearly filled, only requiring some six or eight more courses to complete the packing by this firm.

—The funeral services of Mrs. Jack, of Emerald Grove, whose remains were brought here yesterday from Chicago, will take place to-morrow at the Grove.

The funeral of Mrs. Henry Jones, of the same place, was held to-day.

—James Murray, George Ryan, and James Clark, belonging to the fraternity of tramps, were before the Municipal Court to-day, and, after receiving a lecture from the court, were each given ten days to work on Sheriff Skavlen's wood pile.

—The remains of the late John V. Huginn arrived from Madison this afternoon, and were taken to his late residence, in the town of LaFramie. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, at two o'clock, at the house, the Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating.

—Wm. F. Hollister, is distributing the following invitation to his friends in this city: "Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Allen, request your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Mary, to William F. Hollister, Wednesday evening, February 1st, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, at half-past eight o'clock, at their residence, Darlington, Wis."

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 7 o'clock a. m. stood 40 degrees above zero, and at 1 o'clock p. m. 53 degrees above. Cloudy and a light rain throughout the day. For the corresponding time last year the thermometer stood 1 below and 11 degrees above.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25, 1 a. m.—The following are the indications for to-day.

Upper lake region—rain followed by clearing weather in the Western portion, southerly to westerly winds, slight changes in temperature, and falling followed by rising barometer in the lower lake region, and rising barometer, stationary or lower temperature in the upper lake region.

THE HUNCHBACK.

James Sheridan Knowles' celebrated play—and which is considered his masterpiece, "The Hunchback"—was given at the Opera house last night by the Hasenwinkle Ideals. It was a misfortune not only to the company but to the people of Janesville in general, that there was not a crowded house. The play itself is a grand one, and the interest in it was doubled because it was exceedingly well given.

Miss Stepanky took the part of "Julia," and Mr. Fred Wildman the title role, "Helen," a character which stands very prominent in the play, was taken by Clara Wildman, in which she did some very fine acting. Of course, the leading character was "Julia," and Miss Stepanky not only looked and dressed the part beautifully, but she also played it with skill, finish, and dramatic power. Mr. Hasenwinkle, who always acts well, and does just the right thing in the right place—never murdering his lines nor faltering in his acting—appeared as "Sir Thomas Clifford," and he did the part with wonderful shades of delicacy, and with manly earnestness. Had there been a large audience last night it would have been the most enthusiastic one seen in Myers Opera house for many months.

ROBERT BURNS.

The One Hundred and Twenty-Third Anniversary in Janesville.

"Some have meat and canna eat, And some would eat that want it; But we have meat, and we can eat, And we'll eat the Lord be thankit."

Cannon's hall was the scene, last evening, of one of the grandest anniversary celebrations ever held in Janesville, it being in honor of the one hundred and twenty-third anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, and was participated in by all classes, and all nationalities, there being at least five hundred people present who participated in the grand banquet, and joined in the merry dance.

The hall commenced filling up early in the evening, and the time was spent in social conversation and the exchange of congratulations, until nine o'clock, when the party sat down to the banquet tables, which were loaded with many good things to satisfy the appetite and hunger of those who surrounded them. Rev. Mr. McLean invoked the Divine blessing, and amid the rattle of plates, knives and forks, the unceasing hum of chatting, the unloading of the tables commenced in earnest. While the party were thus engaged, Captain Norcross announced that the Daily Gazette had received a dispatch from Washington which stated that "the jury in the Guiteau trial, after being out six minutes, had returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree." This was received with long and continued applause and shouts, conclusive that all nationalities will say much to the verdict. When the wants of the "inner man" had been satisfied, Mr. James Shearer, chairman, announced the first sentiment, "Robert Burns," and called upon Rev. T. W. McLean for a response. The reverend gentleman acquitted himself handsomely, and gave the audience a brief but eloquent outline of the life of Burns, which received the hearty applause of his hearers. Mr. Shearer next introduced Mr. Davidson, who sang, "There was a lad born in Kyle," and received the hearty greeting of those present. Mrs. J. S. Day was introduced and read "A man's a man for a' that," which was rendered in her happiest manner, and was received with such hearty applause that the lady was compelled to again bow to the party, and recited "Kissing's no Sin." "The Poets of America" was responded to by Rev. Mr. Pullen, who, although taken wholly by surprise, alluded in brief and fitting words to the great galaxy of American poets. This speaker was followed by Mr. Robert Airs, who favored the company with a song, which he sang well, and received the long and hearty plaudits of his hearers, but he retired from the room which prevented hearing him again. The sentiment of "The Press" was given to Mr. A. O. Wilson, of the Times, who made some very humorous remarks appropriate to the subject, and was greeted with frequent outbursts of applause and laughter.

"John Anderson, My Joe John," was sweetly sung by Mrs. H. A. Smith, and she, too, received the hearty plaudits of her hearers. She was followed by another recitation by Mrs. Day, "John and Tib's Dispute," and for an encore gave "Cuddle Down." Mr. Davidson was again announced with another song, followed by Hon. Andrew Barlass, who sang so well that he was compelled to again appear, but we were unable to obtain the title of either of the pieces sung by the two last gentlemen.

The feast at the banquet tables concluded with "Auld Lang Syne," the party rising to their feet and participating, led by a trio composed of Mrs. H. A. Smith, George K. Colling and Robert Airs.

The hall was then cleared and the dancing commenced, and continued until morning, Harry Anderson presiding over the musicians. All who were present will long remember the pleasant enjoyment of last evening.

Common Council.

The semi-monthly meeting of the city council was held at the City Hall last evening, at which Mayor Lovejoy presided, and the alderman being present except Ald. Henning.

The journal of the last regular meeting was read and approved, and that of the special meeting approved without dissent, upon the motion of Ald. Fitzgibbon.

A recommendation received from Street Commissioner Church that the city contract for hard wood planks for the purpose of replanking Milwaukee street bridge, was referred to the highway, street and bridge committee.

The clerk read a notice, stating that a judgement had been entered in the case of Smith vs. the City.

A petition from tax-payers of Third Ward asking for the erection of two lamp-posts in the ward, was read, and after considerable debate, it was referred to the gas committee.

At this point the mayor announced that the Daily Gazette had received a special dispatch from Washington, stating that the jury in the Guiteau trial had returned a verdict of guilty, after six minutes' consideration. The announcement was received with a spontaneous burst of applause by the council and spectators, and sentiments of approbation from the aldermen and mayor.

The bond of Dr. C. L. Martin, as pound-master, was approved upon the report of the judiciary committee.

Ald. Nowlan, from the finance committee, made a report favorable to the allowance of a number of bills, which was concurred in.

The same committee reported back two bills of Thomas Tennant, for work in the First and Fourth wards, without recommendation. The council endorsed the action of the committee.

The bill of C. V. Whipple, amounting to $178.85, known as the First ward small-pox bill, was reported back by the finance committee without recommendation, and after being explained, was allowed at $100. Ald. Fitzgibbon making the motion and being the only alderman voting against it.

Ald. Norris moved that the bridge committee be instructed to ascertain the cost of the hardwood plank necessary for replanking Milwaukee street bridge, and report, which was adopted.

Ald. Fitzgibbon introduced an order directing the city clerk to advertise for the purpose of ascertaining which paper would do the city printing the cheapest.

This re-opened the question of printing, and after a short debate, the order was referred to the printing committee, with instructions to report at the next meeting.

Upon the suggestion and statement of Ald. Fitzgibbon, the street commissioner was instructed to remove the bark from the piling of the Court Street bridge.

The council then adjourned.

CHAINED HIMSELF.

How a Texas Farmer Arranged for His Death from Hydrophobia.

A Dallas (Texas) letter says: "A tragic death has just occurred in our neighboring county of Hill worth relating, and worthy of Virginius or any other Roman father. One year ago George Arnold came to Dallas on private business, and while walking the streets was bitten by a worthless cur which was frothing at the mouth, and showing other symptoms of hydrophobia. Mr. Arnold became alarmed and very much excited when convinced in his own mind that the dog was mad. He went to a physician and had the wound severely cauterized. Then, going home, he was still very uneasy, and dreaded hydrophobia so much that he hunted up a mad-stone and had it applied for several weeks, off and on. He took every other precaution which was suggested, resting all the time under a mortal dread that the virus had gone into his system, and would sooner or later kill him. He had a wife and several small children living on a rather isolated farm, and the thought that he might suddenly lose his reason and harm his little babes horrified him. The other day he began to experience strange feelings, and at once concluded his time had come. He then procured a twelve-foot trace-chain and strong lock and went to the woods. After writing his wife a calumnet, in which he told her what was about to happen, giving directions as to his wishes after death, and pouring out a volume of love for her and their children, he ran the chain round a tree, drew it through the large ring at the end, and then wound the other end around his ankle so tight that it would not slip over the foot, locked it with the lock, and threw the key far beyond his reach. The body was found two days after, still chained to the tree. There was all the evidence necessary to show the horrible death from hydrophobia. The ground was torn up to the full length of the chain, the nails of the fingers were clenched, and all his front teeth out in scratching and biting the tree, and every thread of clothing off his body. The body was dreadfully lacerated with these, the only weapon the madman could use. He had judged rightly what would have been the consequence had he remained at home, and knowing that there was no human skill that could have cured him, preferred death alone, and in that way, to doing harm to those so near and dear to him as a wife and children.

"Arnold was originally from Talladega, Alabama, where he married, and where his widow has many friends and relatives."

Carlyle and Newton.

"F. W. R." sends to the London Times the following authentic version of the burning of the manuscript of the first volume of Mr. Carlyle's "French Revolution," given by Mrs. Carlyle many years ago: "When Mr. Carlyle had completed the first volume, Mr. J. S. Hill called on him and stated that he had heard he was engaged in writing the history of the French revolution, adding that he had himself intended to write on the subject, and that he would be glad to see what was already done, in order that he might judge of the advisability of commencing the work or not. Mr. Carlyle readily lent his manuscript; but it happened shortly afterward that Mr. Hill's cook had occasion to bake some cakes, and finding the precious manuscript lying about, she concluded that she might turn it to good account, and accordingly, partly as fuel and partly as lining for the cake tins, she used up the whole of the manuscript. "M. On it I have kept notes," said Mrs. Carlyle, "but gets all his materials ready, works till he has everything in his head and then winds it out like silk from a reel." Horrified at the accident Mr. Hill and Mrs. Taylor called on the great historian. "Such a thing never happened before," said Mr. Hill. "Yes, though," answered Mr. Carlyle, "Newton and his dog Diamond." "True, but Newton went mad over it." "Well, well, we shall hardly be so bad as that," said Carlyle; and he soon afterward began again at the beginning, scarcely saying a word about his misfortune at the time, but afterward, as the work progressed, grumbling about it often."
